Summary Statement

Other local public agencies sometimes exchange use of competitively bid and awarded contracts if the product specifications closely match what they are looking for and the bid process is acceptable to that agency. This sometime reduces the entire procurement process in half if the specifications closely match. We usually include "cooperative purchasing" language with most bids so that other local agencies may elect to use our bid/award process when they cannot achieve similar pricing on their own or do not have sufficient and trained staffing to conduct this bid process.
